Born into poverty in 1955, Mulli's childhood was marred by abuse and neglect. Abandoned by his father and raised by a struggling single mother, he knew firsthand the pain and desperation of a child without a home or family.

Compelled by a deep sense of compassion, Mulli vowed to break the cycle of poverty and despair. In 1989, with meager resources and unwavering faith, he founded Mully Children's Family, starting with just nine orphans.

Over three decades later, Mully Children's Family has become a beacon of hope, transforming the lives of over 10,000 children.
