Fuhr was born in Spruce Grove, Alberta, in 1962. He started playing hockey at a young age, and his natural talent was quickly apparent. Fuhr was a standout player throughout his minor hockey career, and he was eventually drafted by the Edmonton Oilers in the first round of the 1981 NHL Entry Draft.

Fuhr made his NHL debut with the Oilers in 1981, and he quickly established himself as one of the best young goaltenders in the league. He helped the Oilers win their first Stanley Cup in 1984, and he was a key member of the team's dynasty in the late 1980s and early 1990s.

Fuhr was known for his athleticism, quick reflexes, and competitive spirit. He was also a gifted puck-handler, and he often helped the Oilers start their offense from the back end.

In addition to his success on the ice, Fuhr was also a role model off the ice. He was known for his positive attitude, his work ethic, and his dedication to his community.

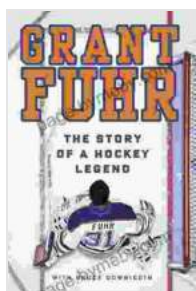

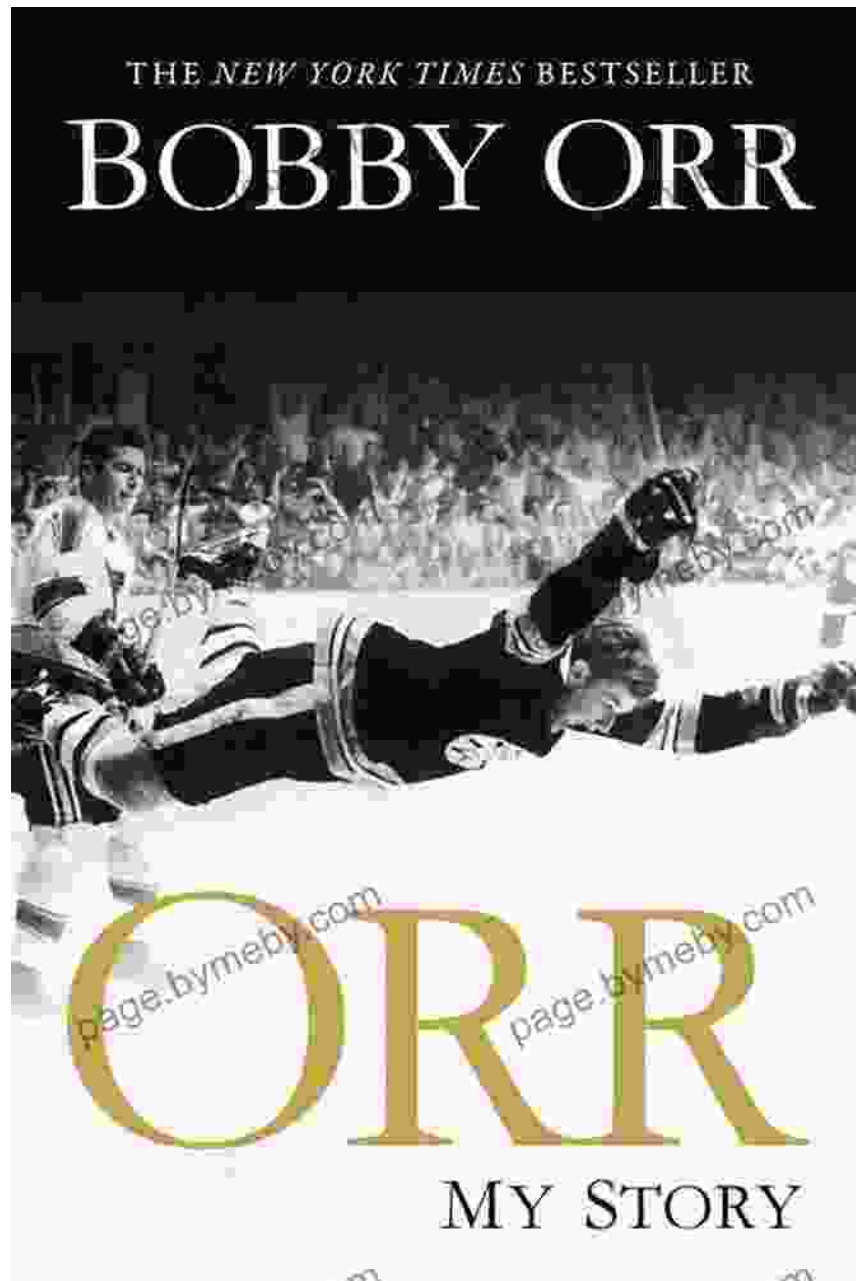

Fuhr retired from the NHL in 2000. He finished his career with a record of 403-282-90, a save percentage of .919, and a goals-against average of 2.93. He is widely considered to be one of the greatest goaltenders of all time.

In 2014, Fuhr was inducted into the Hockey Hall of Fame.
